Introduction

BK SURCO Training is delighted to present its full day Annual Conference entitled “Managing Construction Risk for the benefit of Employers and Contractors” on Wednesday, 21st November 2012 at the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre.

“No construction project is risk free. Risk can be managed, minimised, shared, transferred or accepted. It cannot be ignored.” (Sir Michael Latham (1994) Constructing the Team).

“The delivery of a construction project is a highly complex process, involving multi-disciplinary inputs provided by a vast number of participants from tradesmen, technicians, supervisors, professionals, consultants, contractors and sub-contractors to client organizations and regulatory authorities.” (Report of the Hong Kong Construction Industry Review Committee [“The Tang Report”]). Highly complex processes require effective risk management.

SURCO Ltd has for many years been training employers and contractors in the UK on effective approaches to managing construction risk. In Hong Kong, BK SURCO Training has also conducted training seminars and workshops with the objective of raising commercial awareness among engineers, project managers, quantity surveyors in order to increase their effectiveness in managing construction risk.

This conference therefore provides a unique opportunity to learn from legal, engineering and surveying practitioners with many years experience in the construction industries of Hong Kong and the UK and knowledge of the various approaches to the allocation and management of risk under the standard forms of contract used in Hong Kong and overseas.
